

Community and Professional Development Training

a program of the Maryland Center for Developmental Disabilities at Kennedy Krieger Institute

Who We Are

The Community and Professional Development Training Program offered by the Maryland Center for Developmental Disabilities (MCDD) at Kennedy Krieger Institute is committed to partnering with local, state, national and international agencies and organizations; people with disabilities and their families; health and allied health professionals; and community members to provide technical assistance, evaluation and evidence-based training across a broad spectrum of topics to improve the quality of life of people with disabilities and their families.

What We Do

Our goal is to support and enhance professional development opportunities for professionals and community members and expand their knowledge and skills to engage in effective advocacy in areas such as prevention and early intervention, mental health and disabilities, special education law, school and community engagement, human behavior and behavior supports, cross cultural practice, and education. MCDD provides continuing education credits to professionals.
